

Genesis 6:14

¶ Make thee an ark of gopher wood; rooms shalt thou make in the ark, and shalt pitch it within and without with pitch.

- After God announces His judgment on the earth to Noah (v13) He begins instructing Noah on how to construct the ark. Take special note that the instructions begin with an overview of the whole project (v14).

The literal aspect of the verse is straightforward. The boat is to be made of wood so it is buoyant on water and sealed on the inside and the outside to make it waterproof.

Genesis 6:14

¶ Make ^{H6213[(H8798)]} thee an ark ^{H8392} of gopher ^{H1613} wood ^{H6086}; rooms ^{H7064} shalt thou make ^{H6213[(H8799)]} in ^{H854} the ark ^{H8392}, and shalt pitch ^{H3722[(H8804)]} it within ^{H1004} and without ^{H2351} with pitch ^{H3724}.

- Notice anything unusual about the Strong's numbers for this verse?
- The English word "pitch" appears twice in this verse; however, the Strong's number for each instance of "pitch" is not exactly the same. That's because the Hebrew words rendered to English as "pitch" are not exactly the same.

At this point you may or may not be tempted to grab a Strong's concordance and look up each Strong's number definition to find out why these two are different. Let's forego that today and try something you may not be familiar with.

Have you ever wondered how James Strong or Noah Webster acquired their definitions? Have you ever wondered if those processes are reproducible? If their definitions are based on the Bible and the Bible never changes it stands to reason that those processes to acquire those definitions should be reproducible. Additionally, we should also be able to unequivocally prove the results. By working in reverse order we can thereby prove the work (1 Thess 5:21a) and also discern whose work it really is (Heb 4:12f). Gods will is accomplished regardless of men or circumstances and His work can be confirmed and recognized using His own word and His Spirit (John 14:26, John 16:13a-d).

We'll begin by gathering our Strong's numbers which throughout this exercise are simply a coded representation of words that appear in God's word.

H3722	H3724
Appears 102 times in 94 verses.	Appears 17 times in 17 verses.

And next, we will look at every Biblical English usage of those exact same Hebrew words which correspond to these Strong's numbers (for this exercise the verse being looked at, Genesis 6:14, has been excluded below).

Below you will find separate lists of verses for each and every appearance of those Strong's numbers. The words highlighted are the exact English words rendered from the Hebrew words that we are looking at.

Following those lists will be a table with an outline of Biblical usage for each Strong's number. WARNING: The summaries are of little to no use outside of their context and so each usage must be understood in its context first.

As you study the verses below, keep a mental note of the ideas that are given to us. When you are done reviewing both, go back to the beginning and apply what you learned to their respective words in Genesis 6:14 and its context. The connection to an overarching Biblical figure that becomes self-evident may surprise you.
