Summary (for his crying)

- Hebrew: “to his destruction” / “to cause him to die”
- Referring to his crying after his destruction or death
 - As the result of his mistake

Literally:

Punish/Reform/Chastise/Instruct/Teach/Correct/Reprove him to avoid his destruction/death.

Direct OT example:

Eli and his sons. Eli was rebuked for honoring his sons above God. That could have potentially been avoided if Eli would have instructed, corrected, reformed, or punished his sons above the reproof that he did give to them. As we can learn from God's word in Lev 26 and Deu 28, God's chastisements meant to correct the children of Israel have an increasing severity to them and we should follow His example.

Extension examples:

David, Tamar, Absalom, and Amnon. David was (as far as we are told) completely silent about this atrocity. God's law provided a means to resolve the situation without death assuming that Tamar was not betrothed (Deu 22:28,29) but Amnon chose to hate her more after raping her. Was he instructed about this? Was any attempt made to teach and correct him? Not that we know of. Was he reproved, punished, or chastised for raping his sister (IIRC, to different mother)? Not that we are told so I assume no he was not. And that is at least one reason why this example was given to us by God to learn from. Because this situation was not handled as God instructed, it led to Amnon's brother Absalom sinning even further by taking justice into his own hands and murdering his own brother (IIRC, to a different mother). Now, that doesn't justify Absalom's actions by any means, but it could have potentially been avoided entirely if both the situation with Tamar and both sons were handled as God instructs.

Application by extension examples:

- Instruct/teach your children in order to avoid discouragement.
- Correct your children to avoid despair.
- Reform and do not ignore bad behavior in your children.
- Punish your children according to their error.
- Set clear boundaries for your children and when they cross them do not fail to punish them accordingly.
- +Proverbs 22:15, if the child has escalated the situation sufficiently, physical punishment may be necessary (a rod is a wooden stick).
 - God's word teaches us in Lev 26 and Deu 28 by His own example that the chastisement must have an escalation to it. Therefore, using the same punishment for repeats of the same error (or all errors) will not lead to a favorable outcome.
 - Likewise, using the same punishment for all errors will never lead to a favorable outcome.
