

Pate

Psalms 7:16
His mischief shall return upon his own head^{H7218}, and his violent dealing shall come down upon his own pate^{H6936}.

A “pate” is the same as a “head”. These two words are made equivalent by the parallelism in the verse alone. We could stop there but what happens if we dig a little deeper? Let’s look at how God uses the Hebrew words and primitive roots that God translated to any other English word(s) everywhere in the Bible. We could simply look at every English usage of these words but as you will see we wouldn’t learn nearly as much about how God uses these words (eg. pate only appears once).

Have you ever taken notice that in a dictionary how there are sometimes multiple definitions for each word? That is called an “outline of usage/definitions”. God doesn’t always use one definition for any of His words and if we want to know that “outline of usage” or all the definitions for a particular word, we have to work to obtain that. By doing so, we can also ascertain which particular definition God used in any particular verse which is especially useful when that is not obvious by the context alone.

H7218 appears 598 times in the Bible and so instead of a comprehensive list let’s look at a summary of how it is used. The results were compacted by limiting the number of words before the Strong’s number H7218 to two words (otherwise the summary would be roughly twice as long). The summary was generated in 0.03 seconds using a custom software tool that is open source and freely available here: https://github.com/toazd/php_outline. Note that the tool itself also displays all the verses which were used to create the summary but that list is far too long to put here.

And now let’s look at the summary for H6936:

Words	Times used
his crown	1
his head	1

the head	5
thy head	2
Total	11

Now, let’s connect the English words or ideas together following God’s pattern when He translated His word from one language to another Psa 12:6,7. This is a purposely simple example and may seem a trivial exercise at first but not when you realize that the same principal can be applied to any other word/words/verse. Note also that while these words/ideas are connected they are not necessarily direct equivalents.

his crown	H6936 or H7218	Pate or head
own pate scalp
the head
chief beginning*
top principal chapter ruler sum*

Example application:

Numbers 1:2,3

² Take ye the sum^{H7218} of all the congregation of the children of Israel, after their families, by the house of their fathers, with the number of their names, every male by their polls;

³ From twenty years old and upward, all that are able to go forth to war in Israel: thou and Aaron shall number them by their armies.

- Notice that the count does not include everyone? It’s only “every male”. Based on the Hebrew alone we don’t even need to read “every male” to know that that is what God meant. But, because He did, that tells us also that “every male” is considered by God to be the heads, the chiefs, and the rulers.
- And so what we see is God’s word in Hebrew (as codified by Strong’s numbers) both confirming and agreeing with God’s word in English.
- If you don’t see both of those attributes you either need more wisdom (James 1:5, Romans 8:27a) or it is not God’s word. There is no in between (Galatians 5:9).

Example “cross over” application (into the new testament):

Colossians 1:12-18

12 Giving thanks unto the Father, which hath made us meet to be partakers of the inheritance of the saints in light:

13 Who hath delivered us from the power of darkness, and hath translated us into the kingdom of his dear Son:

14 In whom we have redemption through his blood, even the forgiveness of sins:

15 Who is the image of the invisible God, the firstborn of every creature:

16 For by him were all things created, that are in heaven, and that are in earth, visible and invisible, whether they be thrones, or dominions, or principalities, or powers: all things were created by him, and for him:

17 And he is before all things, and by him all things consist.

18 And he is the head^{G2776} of the body, the church: who is the beginning^{G747}, the firstborn^{G4416} from the dead; that in all things he might have the preeminence.

- Finding new testament Strong’s “equivalents” is not as difficult as it may seem. We can use the English to make the “cross over” and connect them together.
 - H6936/H7218 → G2776: head(s) (76x)
 - H6936/H7218 → G747: Prince (2x), captain, author
 - H6936/H7218 → G4416: firstborn, first begotten
- We would need to do more work to find and then parse through all of the new testament “equivalents” but you should get the idea from this simple example. eg. G2776 is a perfect match.
 - A new testament “equivalent” is the G-prefixed Strong’s numbers that are “equivalent” to their H-prefixed counterparts in the old testament. Note that they would need parsing because not all of them that are connected are directly applicable and also they are not “equivalent” they are just connected.
- Using this technique we can bridge the testaments and begin to discover the phenomenal interconnectedness of the Bible. It isn’t two separate volumes haphazardly glued together – it’s all one body and one Word (Revelation 19:13).
