Deuteronomy 1:3 Deuteronomy 34:8 Joshua 2:5,16,22,23 Joshua 3:1 Joshua 1:11 Joshua 4:19	min. of 38 days elapsed	The last recorded date of Moses being alive occurs on the 40th year, 11th month, 1st day. Now, we add the time periods we are given after Moses' death: 30 days mourning Moses' death. 4 days, spies to Jericho. 1 day, moving the entire camp from Shittim to the Jordan. 3 days waiting by the Jordan river. If we add this minimum of 38 days we come to the 40th year, 12th month, 9th day. Based on that, the earliest date when the children of Israel could have crossed the Jordan is the 41st year, 1st month, 10th day (Joshua 4:19). But it didn't happen that year because that would be impossible: from the time they left Egypt on the 1st year, 1st month, 15th day to the 41st year, 1st month, 10th day comes to exactly 14,395 days elapsed (39 years, 11 months, 25 days) which is not even 40 years. We know from Numbers 14:20-34 (and everything that happened before it) that the judgment to wander for 40 years was given after they had already traveled for over a year. This pushes the minimum date for the entering in of the promised land to the next year (42nd year, 1st month 10th day). But, it didn't happen that year either because that would be 14,755 days elapsed. 40 years of wandering is exactly 14,400 days. 14,755 – 14,400 = 355 days. 355 days is not enough time to cover the over one year of traveling that occurred before the 40 year wandering judgment was given in addition to the 40 years of wandering. Therefore, the minimum date for the crossing of the Jordan is the 43rd year, 1st month 10th day. From the last time that Moses spoke, which was after the campaigns against Sihon & Og (Deu 1:3), to the earliest possible day that they could have crossed the Jordan, exactly 789 days passed (2 years, 2 months, 9 days).
Numbers 33:3 → Joshua 4:19	15,115 days (41 years, 11 months, 25 days elapsed)	Total minimum time elapsed from the departure of Rameses (1 st year, 1 st month, 15 th day) to the crossing of the Jordan into Canaan (43 rd year, 1 st month, 10 th day).
